The big blue crane is gone. Vertical construction is complete. The windows are installed. Returning students and faculty are seeing huge strides forward in the making of the new Cabell Library (#newcabell). The building, which has remained open throughout construction that began in winter 2014, will continue around-the-clock operations during the final phases of construction. New service points and sections will open in stages, with the building fully furnished and open in January 2016. Save the date for the grand opening ceremony: March 15, 2016. Details and dates

Save the Date: Oct. 27 is inaugural donor event

VCU Libraries will host a dinner event celebrating loyal and longtime donors who have given at certain levels. This invitation-only

Sign up for a fall semester hard-hat tour

Construction is moving at a fast clip. The development office is now taking requests and reservations for small-group hard-hat tours. To event will be held Oct. 27 at the historic Scott House. We're looking forward to sharing this evening with many supporters.

see what's happening with your own eyes, please contact us. We look forward to showing our loyal donors around!

“With the help of you, our very good friends, we can raise a transformative amount of money this fiscal year, far and beyond our best ever.”

University Librarian John E. Ulmschneider on VCU Libraries’ fundraising goal for 2015–16

News

Images, sounds and text lead to dance creations

Short courses break away and build on the big bike race

Save the dates for upcoming VCU Libraries events

Your new library in 2015-16: New spaces available and more to come soon

Boris Fishman wins 2015 VCU Cabell First Novelist Award

Virginia Living features dentist whose photos are on display through Sept. 30

New VCU Bulletin and its archives launched

2015 Levis Reading Prize goes to poet Sandra Lim

Events

Sept. 16: Meet VCU’s Authors: David C. Wojahn

Oct. 7: Meet VCU’s Authors: Faedah Totah

Oct. 8: Levis Reading Prize Night

Oct. 15: Advance Your Research

Exhibits:

Opening Oct. 26: Pictures of Nursing: The Zwerdling Collection

Opening Oct. 27: Unmasked: A Visual Dissection
Holy rare collectibles! Three set design paintings from the 1960s “Batman” TV series and movie that are held by VCU Libraries’ Special Collections and Archives will be put on display this fall as part of an upcoming exhibition, “Superheroes in Gotham,” at the New-York Historical Society Museum & Library in New York City. More about the exhibit and these treasures.

Follow VCU Libraries on YouTube
All about the bike race
Inside the Collections blog